INTRODUCTION

In recent years the online environment is viewed by users from a new perspective, in a commercial way. Its development and the emergence of online stores have turned users into consumers. Also, the most important role of social media has changed the way of how consumers and marketers communicate. The Internet allows different forms of media to converge. What once used to be multiple separate devices such as a telephone, television, or personal computers have now merged into single technological devices that are made commonly available in user-friendly formats. Convergence has an important impact on user habits, including those of children as well as affecting business advertising practices, revenues, content offerings and financing.

Digital Marketing is crucial platform in brand development, brand promotion and brand management. This research evaluates how the digital media has helped in enhancing the concept of Brand Positioning, for different brands that exist and how it had an effect on the consumer behavioral patterns to create a positive image. In the process

A powerful global digital marketing system—designed to deliver personalized interactive commercial messages wherever we are—is emerging as one of the principal features of the internet era. Advertisers and marketers around the world are collaborating to perfect what they are calling a 'media and marketing ecosystem.'<sup>1</sup> Harnessing the interactive capabilities of social networks, broadband video channels, mobile services, video games, and virtual worlds, marketers are, not surprisingly, focusing much of their attention on children and adolescents. Products linked to the youth obesity epidemic are now regularly advertised through such digital advertising strategies, with food and beverage companies playing a major role developing this new marketing landscape. Beyond junk food, of course, consumers young and old will increasingly face a dizzying array of sophisticated pitches delivered to their personal computers, mobile devices, and digital TVs. Pharmaceuticals and other health care products, toys, autos, travel, and (if we can afford it) mortgages and loans, are already being marketed in the United Kingdom and elsewhere using cutting-edge online advertising strategies.
