LITERATURE REVIEWS

(Ewerling F, 2020) in their study the impact of women’s empowerment on their children’s early development in 26 African countries discuss and conclude that overall study results show a consistent positive effect of empowerment on the literacy numeracy domain of child development cross-nationally in Africa, and this was particularly evident for the social independence domain of the SWPER (Mother’s empowerment was measured by the Survey-based Women’s emPowERment) (SWPER) global index. Programs and interventions may also consider addressing the reduction of gender inequalities to improve child development.

(Alma Tamunonengiofori Banigo, 2017) In their study titled Girl-Child and Women: Education and Empowerment for Sustainable Development discuss that the girl-child and women education contribute positively in national development and achieving national transformation. The deprivation of quality formal education to women in a society could result to an irreparable and uncountable loss in most sectors of the economy. This great loss affects Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) and other workforce around the globe. Therefore, it is most expedient that girls and women acquire quality education in order to greatly contribute towards the growth and development of the whole nation.

(others L. B., 2021) in their study titled Associations between women’s empowerment and child development, growth, and nurturing care practices in sub-Saharan Africa: A cross-sectional analysis of demographic and health survey data conclusion, they found evidence suggest that women’s empowerment was positively associated with child cognitive development in SSA, but not child socioemotional, literacy-numeracy, or physical development. The association between women’s empowerment and child cognitive development is plausible, given the positive associations with the underlying nurturing care outcomes, i.e., early learning and nutrition. Household wealth and woman’s education modified the association between women’s empowerment and child literacy-numeracy development and early learning. Different empowerment dimensions predicted different outcomes. Future research should focus on improving measurement, exploring longitudinal associations, and establishing causality. Interventions to promote child development and growth should engage men to increase women’s empowerment and gender equity with respect to child care and support.

(S, 2021) In their research titled as A role of women in today’s society: A review discuss and conclude that global concern has steadily grown through the past few decades and has resulted in efforts to bring women into the mainstream of life, mainly through socio-economic activities aimed at empowering them and thus restoring equality between the sexes. The journey of liberation of women has crossed many milestones and the society has indeed come a long way. They have struggled hard over the last few decades but still been able to successfully establish their own identity. Today’s women are adorned with patience and perseverance, which has helped them to attain the pinnacle of success. Earlier, women were seen only as housewives who were projected to cook, clean and take care of their family. Today- along with handling tough clients at office, they successfully multitask at home too. Women are more focused and have a unique decision making power even at senior leadership level, in the most optimal manner, and at times are in a better position than men. Empowering women can help the society to grow and develop at a faster pace. We are definitely redesigning the world.

(Selvi, Ancient Women of India: Unraveling the Glorious Past of Womanhood in the Country, 2021) in his study conclude that Women are the most integral part of the society and the roles played by women are considerably remarkable and challenging in nature. The role played by women can be traced back in the time of ancient India due to their sacrifices and contribution to the society. The main objective of this study is to evaluate and analyses the roles played by women in ancient times. Role of women empowerment towards child development with CARE To DARE model. Where

D stands for Development

CARE TO DARE MODEL

This model is mainly concern with social empowerment and society, and is a base for all other areas like economic, political, cultural and technological empowerment. Researcher here think that if women are successfully taking CARE and DARE steps for child development as per situation requirement. it is real success in women's life and actual women empowerment in society. Researcher identify CARE To DARE model for likely to be empowered women must be carrying (CARE) where C stands for Carefulness, A stands for Aptitude, R stands for Relations and E stands for Emotions. child development always concerns with carefully thinking about child career and future growth area in talent of child or in ability of child for development in friendly supportive relations with culture based emotional touch. At a same time, probable empowered women must take all decisions with daring (DARE) where D stands for Discover A stands for Analytical R stands for Reciprocation and E stands for Emphasis. So daring is in child development always accept discovery of ways and path for career and life with strong decisions for all good things with analytical thinking exchange it in a good faith with family and society mutual give and take between mother and child for culture, belief, character-building and responsibilities-based duties, history of family and ideal history of "Ramayana" and "Mahabharat" so values can cultivate from root age and old age social problems can minimised, this step may be heart of dare step that is powerfulness in hands of empowered women and always emphasis on ethical value-based life-oriented development of child. It is simply said that bread-oriented development (Information and technique for task) is easy and everywhere but life-oriented development is real and lifelong achievement for child that is not easily available as well emphasis communication between child and mother because at present 99% problems are unsolved because of insufficient communication between family members we reach up to moon but we cannot reach up to child mind their emotions so they feel lonely in crowd and nervous at life stages. It is also major social problem. for making child confident these dare steps gives new sun rise in society. Even for that empowered women must be alert and crave to achievement Caring and Daring both, top of its child care may be always there but Child development may be missing if DARE steps are not taken by women.

CONCLUSION

Empowered or likely to be empowered women need to take in consideration this CARE to DARE Model for her child development. certain extra efforts to develop child career and life is dare. Now women's empowerment means exercising their power and their own actions. Which means having control over your own physical properties, intellectual resources, and your own thoughts for child development and its successful implementation. If overall (Rutman, 1996) powerfulness of women empowerment for child development in society powerlessness is under controlled always.
