BFM Media Statement – 3rd December, 2018

The current allegations circulating are upsetting and distressing for all of us at the radio station. Our first priority is and has always been the welfare of our employees and we take any and all allegations of sexual harassment and misconduct seriously.

We have started formal investigations and we are engaging with those that have been named. Some of the employees involved have taken a leave of absence. We will also be appointing an independent party to assist us in conducting an impartial investigation.

Since the formal investigative process is underway, there are restrictions on what we can publicly announce during the proceedings. Until more information comes to light, we do not wish to make statements that may compromise the investigation and cause further distress to our staff.
