TOPIC: THE DISCIPLINE OF SOCIAL WORK

SUB-TOPIC: THE SOCIAL WORK HELPING PROCESS

- Social work as a helping profession is also considered as a relationship between the social worker and the client. Just like any other relationship, it has a beginning and ending.

According to Hepworth, Rooney, and Larsen (2008, p.35) there is a helping process as made up of three phases.

| PHASE I | PHASE II | PHASE III |
|---|--|--|
| Exploration, Engagement, Assessment, and Planning <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Social worker’s first task is to engage the system in strength - based problem solving directed toward goal accomplishment. - Data gathering for assessment, it is essential for the social worker to apply the “principle of parsimony”, which include but not limited to facts, feelings, persons, circumstances, and systems. - Plans are means to achieve them which consists of the specific actions or steps to be done in order to reach the goals. The Social worker looks at all possible ways of tackling the problem and chooses the most favorable. | Implementation of the plan and the attainment of goals <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Implementation of the plans identified to address the problem are carried out. - The implementation phase of the intervention is directed o meeting established goals and may involve activities: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> a. encouraging family involvement b. engaging other community resources c. role playing d. offering play therapy | Termination <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - The process of formally ending the individual worker-client relationship. - Two terms used in relation to the termination of the client-worker relationship: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> a. TRANSFER is the process by which a client is referred by her/his social worker to another worker. b. REFERRAL is the act of directing a client to another workers/agency worker’s competence. |
